

Home Inventory

Why having a home inventory is important

When disaster such as burglary or fire disrupts your home, life can get complicated quickly. The pain of loss can make it hard to remember the details of your belongings. By having a home inventory prepared, you do not have to worry about scrambling to mentally go through your possessions as we try to process your claim. Home inventories makes the claims process go by faster and provides you with a more complete recovery.

How to fill out the home inventory checklist

- Start with the newest and largest purchases first
- High cost items
 - Be as descriptive as possible
 - Make sure to include model and serial number
- Lower cost items
 - Group together items such as clothing, toys, and cooking ware
- Include receipts whenever possible
- Don't forget to list portable items such as smartphones, laptops, tablets, etc.
- Some items such as jewelry, antiques, and firearms may require a rider (additional insurance)

What to do after your home inventory is complete

- Take pictures or videos of you possessions
 - If using video, you can describe your belongings while recording
 - Pay special attention to higher cost items
 - Keep pictures and videos stored in a cloud-based storage drive
- Keep inventory in a safe deposit box or a fireproof safe along with receipts
- Update your inventory as necessary
